AMERICAS PRESENT PREDICAMENT

By Stanley MacDonald

It may seem strange to the people of America that a relatively small group of evil-minded men should be able to subvert a nation of so-called intelligent people and thus effectuate their virtual enslavement through their machinations from within, but nevertheless it is a well-known fact that from time to time across the years it has been done in various parts of the world, and, human nature being what it is, it would almost seem as though that very thing were being systematically accomplished right here in our own supposedly free and sophisticated United States.

MacDonald

One of the reasons for this lamentable state of affairs is, of course, that the great rank and file of humanity doesn't really stop to think. And, besides, we are so far removed from the days of the great American Revolution and the suffering and anguish of the six long arduous years of that heroic struggle, that we are inclined to take our precious freedom more or less for granted, and to accept the privileges we now enjoy as a result of that harrowing conflict - - at least what is left of them - - as though they were the natural concomitant of ordinary human experience - - just as though we had always had them and as though they would always remain.

But the fact is that we did not always have that freedom, nor, indeed, did it always exist; for up until the adoption of the American Constitution in 1789, government of, for, and by the people, in the form of a true republic and based upon a written documentation, was practically unknown to the world. And so jealous were colonies of the rights they had so recently won from the cruel and unreasoning avarice of England's tyrannical George the Third, they naturally saw to it that the Constitution they were about to adopt as the foundation of their future national existence, while clearly outlining the powers and duties of their proposed new government, at the same time clearly defined the limits of that authority and declared and guaranteed those rights.

And if to make assurance doubly sure, the first ten amendments to the Constitution, which were adopted and went into effect during the first term of Washington's administration and known as the Bill of Rights, were particularly designed to further declare and strengthen and expressly guarantee the rights reserved and retained by the States or by the people.

In other words, the Government of the United States, as originally set up and constituted, was strictly a limited government, whose several powers and duties were clearly detailed and defined. It provided for three separate but co-equal departments, namely, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial; that is to say, the legislative to make the laws, the executive to enforce them, and the judicial to interpret them; each department being entirely independent of the other two, and with their several separate powers and duties clearly and specifically outlined. In fact nothing in that great document was left to the action of chance. It was a studied and precisely written guarantee of the people's rights and liberties, and a God-given guide to success.

Such was the state of affairs in the early days of the American Republic. And the nation grew and prospered as no other nation in the world has grown and prospered in the last six thousand years; that is, until we began to tamper with the immortal compilation that was designed to insure our freedom and guide us on our way. It was then that the trouble began.

And it was in 1913, during President Wilson's administration, that a number of these so-called reforms, or amendments, were put into effect. But whether they were really reforms or not, in the sense of being improvements to the then existing regulations, of course remains to be seen.

One of the first of these unhappy innovations was the change in the manner of the selection of our United States Senators. Originally, under Section 3 of Article 1 of the Constitution, the Senators of the United States were chosen, or elected, by the Legislatures of the several States, instead of by the direct vote of the people as they are at the present time. The reason for this original arrangement, it seems, was that the Senate was intended to comprise a somewhat more able and trustworthy body of men than the more numerous branch of the Congress, and it was thought that the legislatures of the several States would be able to select men of a higher mental caliber, of greater ability, broader learning and intelligence, and of a wider and more varied worldly experience than would be possible if the selection were left to the emotional tendencies of the people at large, - all of which would enable the Senate to act as a sort of check or balance to the more hasty and unreasoning deliberation of the House.

But all this changed when the regulation under Section 1 of Article 17 of Amendments became the law of the land, which among other things, provided that the two Senators from each State should be elected by the people thereof instead of by the Legislatures as before, and which, in effect, simply converted the Senate into another, though smaller, House of Representatives; the only difference between the two branches of the Congress under this new arrangement being that the members of this smaller House are elected for a slightly longer term, are eligible for a slightly higher wage, and are designated by a higher sounding name. Otherwise, to all intent and purpose, they are the same.

And as the party system grew up in America, it became the practice of the different parties to hold their respective Conventions for the purpose of choosing or designating their several candidates - County Conventions for the purpose of nominating candidates for County offices, and State Conventions for the purpose of nominating those of the State. Very often, of course, the names of a number of party members would be placed in nomination for a given office, much the same as in our national conventions of today, but only one candidate would finally be named by either of the parties for any given office, thus avoiding the necessity and eliminating the expense of what we now know as our Primary Elections. In other words, the weeding out of the would-be candidates was done in the party conventions, and not left to bewilder the voters in the Primary, who, in many cases, have little or no chance of investigating the worthiness or unworthiness of the several candidates who might offer themselves for public office.

And as will readily be seen, it was quite impossible under the convention system for any Tom, Dick, or Harry whom nobody knew anything about but who wanted an easy job and happened to have a few dollars in his pocket to cover the filing fee, to become a candidate for any office he might seem to fancy; because, under that system, each such candidate was required to pass the searching scrutiny of the party organization, and that scrutiny, you may be sure, was not easy to pass, to say nothing of such aspiring candidate actually obtaining the nomination.

All this of course, left the way wide open for our newly admitted citizens from the Marxian dives of Europe to begin their infiltration and lay the political groundwork for their corrupting strategies of later years; for under the changes above referred to every political office in the land, outside of those of the President and Vice-President, was thrown wide open to their grasp. And since it is quite difficult, if not impossible, for the man who abides the Christian principles of fair play and the Marquis of Queensberry regulations to compete with the man who strikes below the belt, just so more and more well-meaning Americans were displaced in office and more and more pro-red sboges of foreign nations got hold

SUE THEM FOR LIBEL

"Before I left the party, Senator, the Communist Party — and this is something that everyone should know — agreed that after that period of 1945, with the cold war beginning, all concealed Communists should sue anyone who accused them of being Communists, sue them for libel."

As Alexander Trachtenberg, who made the report said: "This is not necessarily for the purpose of winning the libel suit, it is to bleed white anyone who dares to accuse anyone of being a communist, so that they will be shut up." And, as a matter of fact, that became the policy.

(quoted from testimony of Mr. Louis Francis Budenz, page 506, State Department Employee Loyalty Investigation, Subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations, U.S. Senate, Eighty First Congress).

Stars And Stripes FOREVER

By Franklin Hichborn

Twenty years ago, a costly drive was made to scrap our National Anthem and substitute "God Bless America." Phonograph records appeared throughout the country with "The Star-Spangled Banner" on one side, and the "new anthem" on the other. The scheme was actually promoted in our schools. School children brought home fancy little banners containing the "new anthem." Such banners were displayed in restaurants, grocery stores, barber shops, etc. The "new anthem" was made the theme song of numerous fraternal societies and both 1940 National Conventions. At Candidate Willkie's notification exercises, both "anthems" were sung. Eventually, sound American common sense plus patriotism rejected the "new anthem."

An allied move was a nationwide propaganda drive to install in American minds that the flag of the United Nations holds higher place than the Stars and Stripes under which our independence was won and maintained. At tremendous cost, cloth was distributed to women throughout the country with instructions how to make United Nations' flags, just as Betsy Ross had fashioned the first Stars and Stripes. This attempt to make all American women United Nations' Betsy Rosses was received at first with amazement, which quickly turned to ridicule. Some women did make such flags, but not many. On the day scheduled for the new "Betsy Ross" productions to fly from every schoolhouse and public building, not one fluttered in my home town, Santa Clara. The same was largely true throughout the nation. But the Stars and Stripes appeared everywhere. Not even on the Fourth of July nor Decoration Day had Old Glory been universally displayed.

Allied with these two fizzed-out attempts to change America to minority liking, was the move to remove the crosses from the graves of our soldiers dead. There are reports that this was done in some places. But this, too, in the face of public opinion, fizzed out.

If our drafted sons must, because of foreign entanglements, against which George Washington warned us, participate in foreign wars, let them fight and die under America's only flag, the Stars and Stripes, and leave undisturbed above their graves the symbol of their faith -- The Cross.

WHAT A CONTRAST!

IN THE SOUTH, Tallahassee, Florida, four white boys, drunk, rape a negro girl. The Eastern newspapers feature the case with big headlines and pictures. Hotel lobbies in Tallahassee are crowded with reporters, photographers and TV cameras from all over the United States. The Anti-Defamation League and N.A.A.C.P. and A.D.A. are belching fire demanding the death penalty.

IN THE NORTH, Newark, N.J. eleven negroes in two cars grab a 16 year old girl off the street, take her to a parking lot where all eleven raped and beat her. The accompanying reproduction of the same article in Newark paper fails to even mention they are negroes.

The Monday before this occurrence, three negroes forced a 20 year old secretary into their car in Newark, drove seven miles to Kenilworth, raped her, chewed off one breast, chewed a shoulder and stomach and ruptured her. She is still in a mental institution.

NEWARK EVENING NEWS, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1958

8 Held in Girl Attack

Three Others Sought in Assault on 16-Year-Old

Eight young men under arrest at Newark police headquarters today are charged with the rape of a 16-year-old girl early Sunday morning.

Inspector Edward J. Scanlon said all eight have confessed and that three other men are being sought for participating in the rape. The eight have been identified by the girl, Scanlon said.

His disclosure marked the second time this week that police have announced solutions to rape cases. Tuesday night, police said three men had confessed to the abduction and rape early Monday of a 20-year-old Newark secretary.

Called Most Brutal

The repeated rape of the 16-year-old girl was confirmed by an examination by Dr. Marcus Greifinger, who said the case was one of the most brutal in his experience. The girl also was struck by the men, police said, and one of them threatened her with a knife.

Such as this occurs every week in New Jersey and New York. The A.D.L. and N.A.A.C.P. have exerted such political pressure on newspapers and police departments that every effort is made to conceal the race of attackers.

THE PATRIOT

Since our Press is so completely censored by Jewish economic power to prevent us from realizing what they are doing to us, then it behooves us to read the private Pharisaic Press to learn what they are whispering behind our backs. The following are all direct quotes, often abbreviated:

Judaism rejected the founder of Christianity and even turned against Christianity itself. The California Jewish Voice, July 12, 1957.

Martin Luther, the founder of Protestantism, to his very last breath, demanded apostasy of all Jews, or their extermination. CJV, Sept. 6, 1957.

P. Allen Rickles of Seattle was named president of the CHRISTIAN Friends for Racial Equality. Rickles is also active in JEWISH affairs. NJPO, July 8, 1957. (Bi-religious?)

Officials of the Minnesota Centennial Commission are reconsidering retention of the cross in a proposed Centennial emblem, after a formal protest from the Minnesota Jewish Council. CJV, May 3, 1957.

Plans to post a generalized version of the Ten Commandments in schools of New Hyde Park, Long Island, were protested this week by the American Jewish Congress and the N.Y. Board of Rabbis. NJP, Feb. 8, 1957.

Washington, D.C. Rabbi attacks "Lord's Prayer" in schools. Lauds N.Y. Ban on Decalogue. NJPO, July 5, 1957.

The New Jersey Region of the American Congress, supported by the Rabbinical Council of N.J., urged the State Legislature to defeat a bill which would permit the saying of grace in the public schools. American Examiner, Sept. 26, 1957. (Kosher?)

The American Jewish Congress voiced its opposition this week to the inclusion of any question concerning religious affiliation or belief in the next U.S. census in 1960. CJV, June 28, 1957. (They do not want us to know the REAL whereabouts of the alleged "six million victims of the Nazis"?)

10 YEARS AGO. In an attempt to stop an alarming growth of marriages between Jewish DPs and German frauleins, a conference of Orthodox rabbis in Munich adopted a resolution by which EXTRA food rations were to be cut from DPs who went through with such marriages. NJPO, May 31, 1957. (EXTRA rations for Jews?! Religious tolerance?)

Israeli Women Beat Up Christian Wives of Jews. NJPO, Nov. 8, 1957 (Brotherhood? and Tolerance?)

The day may yet come when one State Department diplomat turns to another and says in Hebrew: "It's hard to be a non-Jew." CJV, May 10, 1957.

Out of this tension and unadjustedness, the dynamic of Jewish existence is engendered, for it is this tension that, humanly speaking, endows the Jew with the ferment of spiritual creativity and the power to fulfill his historical vocation of "giving the world no rest so long as the world has not God". NJPO, Mar. 29, 1957. (A prominent Jew once confided to one of us: "The Jewish people will be their OWN Messiah and will CREATE God." The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion declares that the Jews will give the goyim no peace until they accept the Jewish Sovereign Lord of all the World, the King-Despot of the blood of Zion.)

The Voice will never rest so long as there is any phony in power to stop the march of prophecy. CJV, July 19, 1957. (The prophecy?: "Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow, and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee." Deut. 15:6).

PREDICAMENT

of the political plums. Then, when Franklin Delano finally came to the throne in 1933 and by-passed the immigration laws, America really became the melting-pot of the world and the race to the left began.

The next piece of vicious legislation to be put through in the United States was that which went into effect under the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution providing for the Income Tax. Although this amendment as originally passed set no limit with respect to the ultimate of such a tax, yet it was generally understood that the amount of the tax would be relatively insignificant, and therefore no serious objection to the amendment, as commonly understood, was raised at the time of its proposal. Accordingly, when the law creating the tax was finally passed by the Congress, the maximum take on income of over $3,000 for single persons, and on incomes of over $4,000 for married persons, was fixed at one percent.

Of course no patriotic and well-meaning American would object to such a tax, since the actual purchasing power of $3,000 in those days, before our creeping inflation began, was equal to considerable more than double that amount today, and one percent, under such circumstances, would be a very trifling tax to pay. But the trouble with this new arrangement was the failure of the amendment to set a limit to the amount of the tax that might ultimately be imposed under this rather innocent looking enactment, and, accordingly, the tax on incomes, both individual and corporate, has been gradually increased by our army of left-wing spenders to almost total confiscation in many instances as Government's tax enthusiasts have uncovered new and undreamed-of ways and pretexts for getting rid of the people's money, all in the interest of breaking the Nation's economy and in direct violation of the Constitution and the inherent rights of the people.

But, you ask, where otherwise would the Government get the money to pay its normal operating expenses? To pay this we reply that Section 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution provides ample ways to meet the Government's legitimate expenses aside from the Income Tax. And we say, further, that the moneys raised by the Government under this provision of the Constitution were sufficient to cover all its legitimate requirements for the first 125 years of its existence and, except for a small temporary enactment, carry it through our long and devastating fratricidal conflict, besides several minor wars, and would suffice for its every legitimate need today, but for the fact that the Government, through the action of its special destructionists, has deliberately thrown away the major part of its available revenue under this provision of the Constitution, through its policy of free and unrestricted trade with foreign nations, thereby not only losing its legitimate income from those sources, but at the same time putting many of its own enterprises out of business because of their inability to absorb the tremendous cost-differential due to the great disparity that exists between the wages paid in foreign nations and those that are paid in our own.

But perhaps the greatest of the evils that have befallen the American nation since the beginning for our national existence, was the passage of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, also during President Wilson's Administration. And just how a man of Mr. Wilson's greater learning and ability, and his apparent high regard for the welfare of the American people, could have fallen for this gigantic steal, is one of the things the writer has never been able to figure out, unless, as has been suggested, it was the terrible price he was required to pay for the sinister influence that placed his name in nomination in the following national convention and assured his victory in the 1912 campaign — just one more example of the depth to which a man's vaulting ambition will sometimes lead him.

In this connection we again call attention to Section 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution, wherein it is plainly stated that "Congress shall have power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures." This, in a sense, is a mandatory requirement. In other words, it is a duty that the Constitution lays upon the Congress, and upon Congress alone — a duty that cannot be shirked or evaded, that cannot be assigned or delegated, and that Congress, under the plain wording of the Constitution, must in very truth, perform. Nevertheless, under the terms of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, as we have just recounted, this sacred duty of the Congress was wantonly delegated to a private corporation, one of the early advocates of which is reputed to have said, "Give me control of the money of a nation and I will care not who makes its laws." And so, since that fateful year back in Wilson's Administration, the American nation has been held in the clutches of the vilest money hierarchy the world has ever known, putting the United States Government in debt to the tune of nearly 300 billion dollars on its borrowed capital alone, and at a cost of approximately eight and a half billion dollars a year in interest at the present time.

One other thing that the Government is at present doing, in gross violation of the Constitution, is engaging in divers kinds of commercial activity in direct competition with private enterprise — the real backbone of American prosperity and success. The fact is that no provision of the Constitution gives the Government the faintest glimmer of a right to do this; but nevertheless scores and even hundreds of such illegal institutions have been set up in recent years at the expense of the Government, with practically all of them operating at a loss, -- all of which, in the opinion of this writer, is just another means of gradually putting our private enterprise out of business in the interest of the Communist State, -- the Government, in this particular instance, being to all intent and purposes a traitor to the American people and a block to its own existence -- the means of its own destruction.

Finally, we would like to say a word or two about the United Nations -- that cancerous implantation in glass in the City of New York. And without mincing our expressions in any degree, we will volunteer the assertion that perhaps no more venal and insidious act was ever perpetrated in the 170 year history of the United States than the bringing of that infamous organization -- that spawning-ground of Communism -- to the shores of North America. It was promoted by Marxists, paid for by the USA, and purposely designed to commit the final act of our national liquidation. Through it we bring the enemy directly to our shores to peddle his poisonous nostrums and work our spoliation, and we virtually pay him while he is doing it. All in all, we sincerely trust that one of these fine days, before it is too late, the American people will come to their senses -- will rise in their righteous indignation and throw the said United Nations out of the United States.

Of course there are many other things that are wrong with America today. We cannot mention them all, but we would like to call attention to the giving of all the gratuitous hand-outs to the so-called backward nations, which, up to the present time, have run into many billions; all such gifts being in direct violation of our fundamental law, for nowhere in the whole extent of the Constitution is there the faintest hint that the President or the Congress has the authority to play the part of a grandiose Santa Claus to the entire world or become its paternal guardian.

On the whole, and taking everything into consideration, it is quite apparent that if the United States had minded its own business and manifested just one half the interest in its own affairs that it has in the affairs of other nations, we would not now be involved in the ugly situation that we are today. And if the billions of dollars we have wantonly and unlawfully scattered across the world in recent years, to no really beneficial purpose to ourselves or to the nations we thus presumed to help or foster, had been expended in the interest of America and Americans here at home, our inherent strength and stability would be such that not all the nations in the world combined would dare attack us. In other words, had we but obeyed the homely but sage advice of the beloved father of our country to beware of foreign entanglements, we would not now be involved in ruinous debt and facing an insurmountable foe we fought a costly war to sustain; but, instead, our dollar would be worth a hundred cents, our national defense would be adequate to all our needs, our supply of gold would be sufficient to sustain our currency in any crisis, and a swarm of alien revolutionists would not now be roaming at will across the country in defiance of our laws; our nation would be looked up to by other nations, our counsel in the world would be in favor, our flag would be respected, no nation would intrude upon our rights, and no nation in the world would dare molest our citizens rightfully abroad in foreign lands. Marxist intellectuals have swarmed in, promoting new laws to socialize and communize us.

IT'S UP TO YOU

Our ability to promote this patriotic program depends on cooperation by our friends. Those who are actively directing this movement have severed themselves from business years ago, hence they cannot make money to put into the crusade. We have no regrets -- someone must devote full time to exposing the plotters. Fate put us in this spot and we have dedicated ourselves to the task as long as God gives us strength.

We are not interested in being martyrs. Our objective is to reach sufficient people with facts their newspapers dare not print so as to create intelligent sentiment and turn the Marxist trend which is sweeping us to a precipice.

Our operation is gauged by the funds we receive. We cannot be subsidized by advertising like dozens of propaganda publications such as LOOK and LIFE. But for that advertising they would close down.

We do not have the heart to write you a begging letter each week threatening to stop the presses and fold-up. We do not spend money and valuable time making a big splash to raise hysteria among our friends. We go ahead steady month after month carrying out an effective campaign opening the eyes of more people. No anti-Communist publication reaches half the people reached by COMMON SENSE. The amount of samples we send out, the amount of research we do, the help we give to active patriots depends on the funds we have to work with.

The Christian Educational Association is managed by persons with business background. We make every dollar work. We do not think of ourselves first, the fight last. We are so grateful to the loyal friends who have made it possible for us to reach the many thousands we have, but this must only be a start. We will continue to do our work and hope good Americans will understand the importance of our work and send us every dollar they can spare, and as often as they can, without bringing a hardship to them. This is a fight -- it won't be brushed off. It won't end until patriots thoroughly discredit and thoroughly defeat the anti-Christian intellectual eggheads who are the germs of the world conspiracy. It hurts us when we cannot complete important projects for want of funds.

Stand with us -- we are giving all we have.
